ABOUT DONATION POINT TAP

Today's generation of socially aware individuals are looking for ways to consciously give back to those in need. But with the ever-increasing move to a cashless society, this is increasingly difficult to do with current fundraising methods. Quests' Donation Point Tap now enables people to make 'impulse' donations with contactless payment technology in the same way they used to put small change in coin collection tins.

This easy to use product is increasing the donation amounts being realised by organisations. 'Digital donations' are deposited directly into the organisations bank account every evening, improving cash flow. This fast, seamless process means there is now no need to engage a third party to collect, count and deposit the donated cash.

Donation Point Tap addresses the security concerns and overhead of accepting cash. News stories of retailers being attacked for the cash in coin tins has resulted in some cases, severe physical and mental injuries.

Donation Point Tap is now deployed across Australia and New Zealand by charities and organisations such as hospitals, museums and libraries who rely on the community for financial support.
